Michael Dacre has been at various times a graduate in English, a bookseller, an oral historian and playwright.

He was storyteller in residence at Beaford Arts Centre, has been telling full time since 1988, and has won the dubious Hodja Cup for Lying.

His book of Devonshire Folktales published in 2010 reflects his love of rural Devon where he and Wendy have lived since 1977.

Wendy Dacre studied music at Dartington, is a trained teacher, and has always made all manner of things - huge tents and delicate paper, two-headed dragons and glittering story cloths, as well as singing.

She looks after a network of storytellers and runs yearly 'confabs'.
